Highlight of the Week

Visiting camp this
Wednesday, July 20th

The word karate means “empty hand” coming from the Japanese kara (empty) and te (hand). It was developed by people of the Japanese island, Okinawa, who were forbidden to carry weapons, so they developed an effective form of unarmed combat. Karate was introduced from Okinawa to mainland Japan in 1916 by Master Gichin and later brought to Southern California in 1955 by his pupil Tsutomu Ohshima, where it spread quickly across the world.

Sensei Ken Desjardins joined Shito-Ryu Karate in 1986 at the age of 37, and soon after earned his first degree black belt in 1993. He then established the Desjardins Family Karate Club in 1995, where he has now been teaching Karate for over 20 years.

Counselor Column

I've been enjoying our theme days each week, especially wacky hair day on Wednesdays. The campers are so creative, some hair even turned green! Now that's what I call 'camp-mitment'.
